

Living the Loving Life.

The Practices of the
Love, Loss, and Forgiveness Project

Introductory Workshop on Living the Loving Life

You have in you the source of love that can change your world. In the “Living the Loving Life” introductory workshop, you will experience this inner source of love, empowering you to live more fully by letting go of fear. Through the practice of gazing within, the quality of all your relationships can become deeper and more fulfilling.

We all shy away from death, and our unspoken fear of death can get in the way of living. Facing our own mortality and that of our loved ones can teach us to live our life to the fullest.

In this workshop, you will experience the love-loss-forgiveness practices that Dr. Michael Murphy has developed and refined over the last two decades in Europe and the United States. Following this intensive workshop, you will have the opportunity and will be given the support to form a community-based group to continue exploring the love-loss-forgiveness practices and learn to live a more loving life.
